Accounting involves providing useful information and data to people who make investments, credits, and similar decisions. The management accountant provides information as a member of the management team in the planning and direction of the company's operations. The public accountant offers auditing, tax work, and other financial advice services. Students interested in the accounting major should be aware that in many states the Society of Certified Public Accountants requires 150 credit hours to sit for the CPA exam. It is recommended students complete the undergraduate program in accounting and obtain the additional hours to sit for the CPA exam in a graduate program such as an MBA or Master of Accountancy.
